

Abstract

A rheometer has an upper measuring part and a lower measuring part, between which a measuring chamber is formed for receiving a sample of a substance to be examined. The two measuring parts can be moved relative to each other and, in particular, be turned or pivoted, wherein the upper measuring part and/or the lower measuring part consist at least partially of ceramic material.